Outline
Our teacher refresher course uses the ideas of Teaching Lexically to support more inclusive classrooms that forefronts learners' ideas and experiences to progress their language. Through our interactive classes we always come back to the practicalities of your context where you share experience and practice with colleagues from diverse backgrounds. Our full out-of-class programme brings more intercultural insight and the chance to deepen connections with colleagues. Our participants come away saying they've learnt something new, they are re-energised and more motivated in their teaching, and they have a new network to support them.

Content
The course will cover the following areas looking at how approaches should differ at low and high levels.

Focusing outcomes v language aims
Language ideas to support outcomes
Questions to explore language
Noticing patterns and grammar
Using tasks and exploring emergent language
Giving feedback for speaking
Frameworks and tasks to develop reading
Listening lessons and developing decoding skills
Texts and language exploitation
Developing writing skills
Adapting published material
Revision, recycling and testing

All participants will receive a questionnaire before the course so we can adapt and respond content to participants needs.

Outcomes
After this course participants will have greater motivation in their teaching and have established a network of colleagues in different contexts. They will also develop skills to:

- create more inclusive classrooms
- give more space students' ideas, experiences and opinions
- provide the right language to support student tasks
- encourage and develop 'spontaneous' speaking and learning opportunities in context
- notice issues and give better feedback to students
- help students remember language they've taught and expand on how it's used
- use texts more effectively to develop language, speaking and other skills

- develop students' ability to pronounce language and hear language it in listening material
- teach vocabulary in word combinations and develop grammar through vocabulary teaching
- adapt published material to add value
